Key Findings

1. Contacts KPI recorded the highest value among all NHS mental health indicators, showing high patient engagement with mental health services.
2. Crisis-related indicators also showed significantly high values, highlighting increased demand for urgent mental health support services.
3. Bed-related metrics indicated substantial inpatient mental health service utilization across NHS regions.
4. Admissions KPI values were comparatively lower than contact and crisis indicators, suggesting selective inpatient admissions.
5. RTT (Referral to Treatment Time) KPI reflected ongoing waiting-time pressures within mental health care services.
